CURRENT TOPICS.

MR. FRANCIS ROXBURGH, Q.C., has been appointed Recorder of the Borough of Aldborough, in succession to Mr. Joseph Trigg Schomberg, Q.C., deceased.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that the German Government are drawing up fresh regulations as to the treatment of foreign ships of war in German harbours, the distinguishing feature of which is that these ships of war are to be exempt from all interference on the part of the customs officers so long as they do not land goods. The German Government hope in return for these facilities to foreign men-of-war to obtain similar privileges for their own men-of-war in foreign harbours. So far as Great Britain is concerned, it seems to us very improbable that our Government will be either able or willing to make a similar concession. So lately as 1876, the Customs Consolidation Act (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36), s. 52, re-enacting the previous law, provided that the captain of every vessel having a commission from her Majesty or any foreign state should deliver an account of all goods on board laden in ports beyond the sea, under a penalty of £100; and that all such ships should be subject to all such searches as merchant ships were liable to, and that the customs officers may bring any goods ashore into the Queen's warehouse. The Commissioners of the Treasury may qualify this by regulations as to the Queen's ships, but not as to foreign vessels. Considering how heavy the British duties on tobacco and spirits are, it would not be very prudent to allow a foreign (say a Spanish) man-of-war to lie in Portsmouth harbour with free communication with the shore, without the customs officers knowing how much tobacco, &c., she has on board, or being able to take any steps to prevent it from being smuggled ashore. It is not likely that many foreign ships of war will visit German ports, and therefore the German Government may not suffer from its liberal regulations, but we imagine we shall ask to be excused from following its example.

THE DISMISSAL by the Huddersfield magistrates of a charge against a labourer of stealing twenty-five sovereigns of the date 1807, which were concealed in the chimney of a house he was pulling down, on the ground that the coins "had in fact no owner," recalls attention to the singular state of the law as regards treasure trove. Treasure trove, as Coke says, "where any gold or silver, in coin, plate, or bullion, hath been of ancient time hidden, wheresoever it be found, whereof no person can prove any property, doth belong to the king or to some lord or other by the king's grant or presumption;" and it is the duty of the coroner to inquire who are the finders of treasure trove, and where it is, and whether anyone be suspected of having found and concealed a treasure—which, saith an old statute of 4 Ed. 1, "may be well perceived where one cometh riotously haunting taverns and hath done so of a long time." Concealment of treasure trove is, it appears, punishable by fine or imprisonment; but it has been laid down that "the taking of goods whereof no one had a property at the time cannot be felony; and, therefore, he who takes any treasure trove . . . before [it has] been seized by the persons who have a right thereto is not guilty of felony" (1 Hawk. P. C. 149). But the better opinion seems to be that although the sovereign or lord has no definite property in treasure trove till he has seized, yet the true owner, though unknown, who has lost the money, may still have a property in it (2 East, P. C. 606). And it is, of course, clear that unless the appropriator has reasonable grounds for supposing that the owner cannot be found, his taking the treasure may amount to larceny. Where this is not so, obvious difficulties arise as to proof of felonious taking, but an ancient judge appears to have felt no hesitation in laying down the rule that larceny may be committed by stealing goods, the owner of which is unknown, because, as he sagely remarked, the felony would otherwise go unpunished, "que serret un grande mischiefe en le ley."

A GOOD DEAL OF EXCITEMENT has been caused among traders by some of the provisions of the Weights and Measures Act of last session (41 & 42 Vict. c. 49). The main object of that Act is to consolidate the numerous Acts relating to the subject, but a subsidiary and by no means unimportant object is the amendment of the law. The recent denunciations of the changes effected by the Act are a little late in the day, for the convenient "breviate" or "memorandum as to effect and object of Bill" (under the signature of the draftsman), which was issued with the Bill, when first introduced, afforded ample warning of the proposed alterations. Some of the cases of supposed hardship—such as that of the penalty in the 23rd section for printing false price lists—will be found to be verbatim reproductions of the old law (see 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63, s. 21); but a great alteration is undoubtedly effected by the 3rd section, which enacts that the same weights and measures shall be used throughout the United Kingdom. The old law (5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63, s. 6) only established uniformity in relation to measures, it being held in Giles v. Jones (11 Ex. 393) that contracts by local weight might be lawfully made if the proportion to the standard were expressed. The 19th section, which, in addition to the fine of forty shillings for sale not by imperial weight or measure, provides that any contract for such sale shall be void, is not new, but the corresponding enactment, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 63, s. 21, was neither so clear nor so easy to find. The "copy" of the imperial standard provided by the old law is replaced by a "local standard," and new enactments of considerable minuteness provide for its verification and custody. The sections relating to summary proceedings and appeal are in form entirely new, and partly so in substance. In several cases the maximum penalty is increased in the case of a second offence, and from the memorandum of the draftsman above referred to, we learn that the grant of a moiety of a penalty to the informer was "expressly retained, although not consistent with modern English practice." Such comparison of the fourteen old Acts with the single new one as we have been able to make leads us to the conclusion that the alterations made have on the whole been in the direction of severity towards traders and benefit to the public.

THE LEICESTER MAGISTRATES seem to have been rather exercised with the question of whether a prize-fight with gloves is unlawful. The law, at all events up to a recent date, was by no means uncertain on the point. Although a certain "latitude" was always given to manly exercises when conducted "merely as diversions among friends," yet this was never extended to legalize "public boxing matches and the like, which are exhibited for the sake of lucre." And the reason assigned was not at all the danger to the combatants, but the tendency of such spectacles "to draw together a number of idle, disorderly people" (1 East. P. C. 270), and to encourage, as Mr. Justice Foster said (Foster C. C. 260), "a spirit of idleness and debauchery." Hence, Mr. Justice Patteson laid it down (R. v. Parkins, 4 C. & P. 537), that "prize-fights are altogether illegal," and that "persons who are present on such an occasion, and taking any part in the matter, are all equally guilty as principals." And it may probably be assumed that the singular doctrine laid down by Mr. Justice Brett in the Hackney Marshes case—that where a quarrel had occurred, and a fight was arranged, and money was staked, "only for the purpose of binding the two parties to fight out their quarrel and determine which was the better man," the fight was "not a prize-fight" but "a fair fight"—has no reference to the case of a fight between two pugilists such as that at Leicester, at which, it is stated, several hundred people had assembled to witness the elevating spectacle.

WE ARE INFORMED THAT ASSIZES will be held this month at Manchester and Liverpool for civil as well as criminal business, and that the commission day for Manchester is October 24, and for Liverpool November 4.

WE MAY REMIND OUR READERS of the approaching Annual Provincial Meeting of the Incorporated Law Society, to be held at Manchester on the 23rd and 24th inst.

The death is announced of Mr. Joseph Kay, Q.C., one of the judges of the Court of Record for the Hundred of Salford, who twice contested that borough in the Liberal interest.

The funeral of the late Mr. Justice Keogh took place on Thursday week in the cemetery attached to the Roman Catholic church at Bonn. His wife and his daughter, with her husband, Mr. J. Murphy, Q.C., were present; and Curran, the valet whom he assaulted in a fit of delirium, was at the funeral.

A curious constitutional point, says the Manchester Guardian, is being raised in France with respect to the partial elections which are approaching for the refilling of seventy-five senatorial seats. The constitutional law passed in February, 1875, simply provided that a third of the Senate should retire every three years. The Government, in virtue of this rule, have fixed the elections for the 5th of January, in order to have everything ready for the session which begins a few days later. Many of those, however, whose seats are thus affected, knowing that in the present temper of the country they have no chance of re-election, deny that the vacancies will occur so soon. It is true that they have sat for three Parliamentary years—that is to say for three sessions; but they will not have sat for three natural years till the 8th of March, that being the third anniversary of the meeting of the Senate.

THE CYPRUS ORDER.

THE publication of the Order in Council relating to the administration of the Island of Cyprus has revived a question first mooted in last July, viz., how the Queen's Government can exercise authority in Cyprus. If the Sultan had ceded the island absolutely and for ever to Great Britain, no one would have felt any difficulty about the matter. A long series of precedents has established that territories so acquired become Crown colonies, subject to the unrestricted authority of the Crown, which authority extends to all persons residing in, or resorting to, such colonies, whether natives or foreigners. But in the case of Cyprus the Sultan has only ceded the right to occupy and administer the island for a period determinable upon a contingency, which, though improbable, is nevertheless possible. This has not been the case, so far as we are aware, in any recent British precedents, and therefore, from a constitutional point of view, it might be questioned whether the precedents above referred to applied. The Order in Council, however, purports to be made by her Majesty "by virtue of the powers in this behalf by the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843 to 1878, or otherwise, in her vested," and the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 94), enacts that "it is and shall be lawful for her Majesty to hold, exercise, and enjoy any power or jurisdiction which her Majesty now hath, or may at any time hereafter have, within any country or place out of her Majesty's dominions, in the same and as ample a manner as if her Majesty had acquired such power or jurisdiction by the cession or conquest of territory." When this question was first mooted in the House of Lords last session, and the Lord Chancellor referred to this Foreign Jurisdiction Act, Lord Selborne spoke as if he considered it as applicable exclusively to British subjects; but after carefully examining the language of the Act, we have failed to find anything so to limit it. It is true that the Orders in Council made under the Act, for the exercise of foreign jurisdiction in Turkey, China, and other Oriental countries have been limited to British subjects, but that was because the jurisdiction which the Queen enjoyed by treaty or otherwise in those countries was similarly limited to British subjects, and therefore affords no ground for supposing that the Act would not apply if the Queen, by treaty or otherwise, were to acquire the right to exercise jurisdiction over foreigners. Lord Selborne did not recur to the subject again, nor, so far as we are aware, did any other member of either House take up this point.

This Act, however, merely removes any possible constitutional obstacles to the exercise by the Queen, or those acting under her authority, of such jurisdiction as she may possess, and facilitates its exercise in various ways, especially by enabling prisoners to be sent to British possessions for trial or punishment. Whether her Majesty has, in fact, acquired jurisdiction over Ottoman subjects and foreigners residing in or resorting to Cyprus is a separate question, depending not upon any Act of Parliament, but upon international law, as applied to the treaty by which the Sultan made over to the Queen the right to occupy and administer the island. If the Sultan had ceded the island absolutely to Great Britain, that State would unquestionably have had complete jurisdiction over all persons residing in or resorting to the island. If, on the other hand, the Sultan, being, as he is, an absolute monarch, had sent a pasha to the island with unlimited authority—whether this authority were revocable at pleasure, or conferred for life, or to him and his descendants in the direct line, as Syria and Egypt respectively were conferred upon Mehemet Ali by the Treaty of July, 1840—this pasha would also have had absolute jurisdiction and authority over all persons, whether Ottoman subjects or foreigners, residing in or resorting to the island.* The actual case of Cyprus is intermediate between these two, and it is not easy to conceive that, either as regards Ottoman subjects or foreigners, the jurisdiction made over by the Sultan should be less than in either extreme case.

Moreover, not to go back to the middle ages, which would furnish numerous precedents of one independent sovereign temporarily occupying territory belonging to another, either as a feudal vassal or as a mortgagee, there are at least two comparatively recent cases of the same kind. In 1768 (see I. Marten's Recueil, p. 229), the Republic of Genoa made over to France the right to occupy certain forts and towns in Corsica, and any other portions of that island which the French could re-conquer from the insurgents, and the right to retain them until Genoa repaid the expenses incurred. France re-conquered the whole island and retained it without any further title until the French Revolution. Again in 1803 (Marten's Supp. Tom. III., p. 488), Sweden in consideration of a loan made over to Mecklenburg Schwerin the town of Wismar, and certain adjoining districts, subject to a right of redemption at the end of 100 years. This right of redemption is still subsisting. If, according to international law, when a State was not the absolute owner of the territory it occupied its jurisdiction could be disputed, these two cases would have afforded many occasions when as well foreigners as natives would have been tempted to dispute such jurisdiction, but there is no trace of a controversy on the subject either as to these or any prior cases.

BANKRUPTCY CASES OF THE YEAR.

I.

THE current year's reports contain a considerable number of noteworthy decisions upon the bankruptcy law, and we propose to review briefly the points which appear to us of greatest importance and interest.

The judgment of Lord Hatherley in Breslaue v. Brown (26 W. R. 536, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 672) puts very clearly one aspect of proceedings in composition—the obligation imposed upon the debtor as a condition of relief. The composition is by the Act made binding upon those creditors only the amount of whose debts are shown in the debtor's statement; and it had already been decided by the Court of Appeal, in cases which were cited with approval in the present case, that this provision was to be construed strictly against the debtor, although a creditor might waive it and take advantage of the composition. In Breslaue v. Brown it was suggested that such waiver was effected by the participation of the creditor in the composition in respect of some other debt; as though he could not be bound by it as to one matter without being bound as to all matters of a proveable nature between himself and the debtor. Lord Blackburn, in dealing with this argument, pointed out that the term "assenting creditor," applied to a person who comes in to share a composition of his own free will, not being originally bound by the debtor's strict compliance with the statutory requirement, is an inexact expression. The construction of the enactment is that the composition binds creditors only in respect of debts included in the statement, or as to which that condition is waived. When a creditor who has distinct demands or debts is properly brought into, or subjects himself to, the jurisdiction, whether in taking part in the proceedings he assents or not to the resolution for composition, he is subject to the provisions of the Act, and takes part in the proceedings upon the footing of the enactment so construed. The creditor's claim in the actual case was in respect of a sum which he had been since the composition compelled to answer as surety for a demand against the debtor then unliquidated. The debtor's statement contained no reference to the suretyship liability. "If it was practicable to put an estimate upon it," said Lord Blackburn, "the framer of the Act laid the burden upon the debtor of doing so. . . . If he could not do it, he is not discharged. If he could do it, he has not done it."

Some incidental remarks were made as to the mode in which such a liability should have been stated by the debtor. It might have been estimated by agreement, or by the court; or, in the absence of agreement, the judge might have thought it incapable of being fairly estimated; in which case, as Lord Blackburn observed, the debtor might have been adjudicated a bankrupt by the court on the ground that the composition could not proceed without injustice or undue delay. But whatever the difficulty of stating the debt, the Act imposes upon the debtor and not the creditor the obligation of doing so.

In Pashlee v. Vincent (L. R. 8 Ch. D. 825), it was held that section 12 of the Act (prohibiting other proceedings for proveable debts after adjudication) does not apply to composition; so that proceedings for a demand from which the composition will not release the debtor may be continued, notwithstanding the composition. This decision is in harmony with the doctrine that, in cases of composition, a debtor's property is not transferred by the law to his creditors but remains vested in him throughout.

Ex parte Hopper (26 W. R. 488, L. R. 8 Ch. D. 53), was a case where, after default by a compounding creditor, a new resolution was passed and confirmed at creditors' meetings to accept a greatly reduced composition. There were several other points in the case; but upon the question whether the reduction of the composition was a proceeding competent to a general meeting under the sixth clause of section 126, the Chief Judge held that it was unlawful, and said that it would lead to the most pernicious consequences; the rule of the court was not to be got rid of "that you cannot have a second petition for composition on failure to observe the first." His lordship's judgment was emphatically approved by the Court of Appeal.

The case of Ex parte Gilbey (26 W. R. 768, L. R. 8 Ch. D. 248) involved a point of interest. A compounding debtor was made a bankrupt, and made default in payment of the second instalment of his composition. Notwithstanding this, after the adjudication, a surety, who had guaranteed the third instalment of the composition, was compelled, in consequence of a decision of the Court of Appeal (Glegg v. Gilbey, L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 209), to pay it. He proved in the bankruptcy for the amount paid; and the creditors under the composition proved for their debts less the amount of these two instalments. The surety applied to have these creditors' proofs reduced, and that they might be admitted upon terms. The drift of his contention appears to have been, that the creditors having received money under the composition were precluded, as against the surety, from making any claim inconsistent with it; and must therefore either prove only for the unpaid instalment, or refund the instalment which he had paid. Except with regard to the equitable claim of a surety, the matter was governed by the settled rule that a creditor upon default in payment of a composition is remitted to his original debt; the surety's equity was denied on the ground that he was to be taken to have contracted subject to that rule.

The same case applied to the words, "notice of an act of bankruptcy available for adjudication," in the protecting clauses, sections 94 and 95, the same meaning as was in Ex parte Crosbie (L. R. 7 Ch. D. 123) attached to them in section 31—viz., notice of an act of bankruptcy available for the adjudication which was actually made.

The judgment of Lord Cairns upon the appeal in

* The Pasha's authority as regards foreigners would, of course, be subject to the capitulations subsisting between the Porte and different European Powers; but for reasons which we stated, ante, p. 795, we do not think these could be insisted upon against a European State, whether owning or merely occupying Turkish territory.

Tomkins v. Saffery (26 W. R. 62, L. R. 2 App. Cas. 213) is chiefly remarkable for the somewhat strict construction which he put upon the term "payee in good faith" occurring in the saving proviso of the 92nd section, which relates to fraudulent preference. The Lord Chancellor did not lay it down that mere knowledge of the payor's insolvency was inconsistent with the good faith required; but he referred to that as a test to be applied; and he held that such knowledge, when coupled with the means of knowing that the payor had other creditors, was sufficient to take the case out of the proviso.

The remaining bankruptcy case of importance which has come before the House of Lords is Read v. Bailey (26 W. R. 223, L. R. 3 App. Cas. 95), in which the decision of the Master of the Rolls in Lacey v. Hill was finally affirmed. The appellant contended that the established rule permitting proof against the separate estate of a partner on behalf of the joint estate, in respect of partnership property fraudulently converted by the partner, did not apply where the separate estate under administration was not shown to be larger by reason of the conversion. The Lord Chancellor said as to this: "Whether the separate estate has in the result been increased or not—whether at the time of the proof it is larger than it otherwise would be or not—is a matter which does not concern the application of the rule, and it is sufficient that at one time the separate estate was increased when the property was thus fraudulently converted and taken for the purpose of one partner." Touching the ordinary rule as to proof between joint and separate estates, Lord Blackburn said: "The rule was, I have no doubt, founded partly upon the notion that otherwise there would have been a tendency to fraud, and that pretended contracts would be made with a view to a fraud upon the bankruptcy laws, if a firm were permitted to prove against the separate estate of a partner. That reason of course would not apply where there was no contract at all, and where the right to claim arose not from a contract, but from a wrong, from a tort, a matter in which one of the parties was no sharer in the transaction at all."

The proof in Read v. Bailey was for a demand founded on fraud; a different question relating to the rights arising out of such a demand was dealt with in the very important case of Ex parte Adamson (26 W. R. 890, L. R. 8 Ch. D. 807). The substantial point was whether under the law of bankruptcy proof in respect of a partnership debt incurred by a fraud on the part of the members of the firm could be made against either joint or separate estate at the option of the creditor. It was argued that a condition of the alternative proof was an existing and established joint and several liability; that this liability could only be established by equitable proceedings in the nature of an action for tort; that, therefore, inasmuch as unliquidated damages in an action of tort are not proveable under section 31, no right of proof could be got out of the fraud per se; and before the amount of the liability had been fixed by legal proceedings, the only thing to be recognized was a partnership debt. Lord Justice James, in a judgment the whole of which is most instructive, thus explains the principle upon which the double claim, or right of proof against either estate, rests:—"The Court of Chancery never entertained a suit for damages occasioned by fraudulent conduct or for breach of trust. The suit was always for an equitable debt or liability in the nature of debt. It was a suit for the restitution of the actual money or thing, or value of the thing, of which the cheated party had been cheated. If a man had been defrauded of any money or property, and the cheater afterwards became bankrupt, if the money could be ear-marked, or if the thing could be found in specie, or traced, the assignees or trustees were made to give it back, or if it could not be ear-marked or traced, then proof was allowed against the estate. . . . It is a mere accident, but a frequent accident, that the fraud is connected with a partnership; but where it is, the result often is that the partnership in its joint character is liable for it. If the profits or proceeds of the fraud found their way into the partnership, then on that ground the partnership became indebted for them, or if the fraud was in the course of the partnership business, and was practised by one of the partners on a client or customer of the firm, then the firm—however innocent the other partners may have been, and although the guilty partner alone stole the plunder—was held liable to make full restitution to the defrauded client or customer. But this right to go against the partnership assets did not relieve the guilty party or parties of his or their personal and separate liability by reason of his or their actual participation."

PARTNERSHIP.

A TREATISE ON THE LAW OF PARTNERSHIP, INCLUDING ITS APPLICATION TO COMPANIES. FOURTH EDITION. By the Hon. Sir N. LINDLEY, one of the Judges of her Majesty's High Court of Justice, assisted by SAMUEL DICKENSON, Barrister-at-Law. Two Vols. W. Maxwell & Son.

The main changes in this edition are, of course, in the portions relating to legal procedure. Book 2, chapter 3, on actions between partnerships and companies and non-members; and book 3, chapter 10, on actions between partnerships and companies and their members, and between the members themselves, have been recast, and now contain a singularly clear, practical, and concise exposition of the changes effected by the Judicature Act. We may say in general of this edition that it is refreshing to find the old characteristics of the book still conspicuous in the treatment of new matter. Difficulties are neither evaded nor dismissed with the dogmatic assurance or easy flippancy to be met with in certain recent law books. We have almost always here a conscientious effort to help the reader to the meaning and limits of doctrines and legislative provisions, and to point out to him the pitfalls—in short, to anticipate as far as possible the process of judicial interpretation. We must make a little reservation, however, on one matter. We are a little disappointed with the treatment of Pooley v. Driver at pp. 45–47. There is a careful statement of the facts; but all the comments we have at this place are the following:—"The judgment in this case is very important, and well deserves attentive study. It proceeded upon the ground that partnership is prima facie the result of participation in profits; and that the true result of the whole arrangement was that the advances were not real loans, but were in truth contributions of capital under colour of loans. One of the most remarkable features of this case was that when the time arrived for the repayment of the advances, it might be found that not only was there nothing to repay, but that the so-called lenders might have to refund part of what they had already received, even to the extent of their so-called loans. This practically amounted to a possible loss of their advances, and distinguished the case at once from a true contract of loan; for in such a contract the money lent is to be repaid intact, and the only risk run is the insolvency of the borrower." It is true that on p. 23 we have comments much more worthy of the conscientious care and practical utility which generally characterize the book. As far as they go, these latter observations are admirable; but we think we are not unreasonable in saying that even here the cases of Mollwo, March, & Co. and Pooley v. Driver might with great advantage have been more elaborately contrasted; and we shall hope in the next edition for a full discussion of these cases with reference to the recent decision of the Court of Appeal in Ex parte Delhasse (26 W. R. 339).

THE PARTITION ACT, 1863.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal.]

Sir,—By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 40, s. 8, sections 23—25 of the Settled Estates Act, 1856, were to extend to and apply to money received under the first named Act. Those sections are of great importance, as may be seen by the case of Foster v. Foster (L. R. 1 Ch. D. 588). But these sections of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, were, with the rest of the Act, repealed by 40 & 41 Vict. c. 18, s. 58. The particular sections above referred to of the old Settled Estates Act were re-enacted by the Settled Estates Act, 1877, but no mention was made of their applying to money arising under the Partition Act. What, therefore, would at present be the duty of an executor receiving money under the Partition Act, and to whom would such money belong if an infant entitled died under age? The fact of the repealed sections being re-enacted makes, it appear to me, no difference, as the incorporating Act refers to specific sections of a specific Act.

21, Old-square, W.C.

G. H. CHILCOTT.

[It would seem that the repeal by the Settled Estates Act, 1877, of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, does not affect the sections of that Act incorporated in the Partition Act, 1863.—See Re Bolton's Estates Act; Weekly Notes, 1878, p. 65.—Ed. S. J.]

LORD CHELMSFORD.

The Right Hon. Frederick Thesiger, D.C.L., F.R.S., first Lord Chelmsford, formerly Lord High Chancellor of England, died at his residence, 7, Eaton-square, on Saturday, the 5th inst., in his 85th year, after a short illness. The deceased peer was the youngest son of the late Mr. Charles Thesiger, many years controller and collector of customs for the Island of St. Vincent. He was born in London in 1794, and was educated at the school of the Rev. Dr. Burney, at Greenwich. He commenced his career by taking service in the navy, and was present as a midshipman on board the frigate Cambrian at the second bombardment of Copenhagen. He shortly afterwards left the navy, and determined to become a barrister. He was for some time a pupil in the chambers of Mr. Godfrey Sykes, a well-known special pleader, and he was called to the bar at Gray's-inn in Michaelmas Term, 1818, but shortly afterwards migrated to the Inner Temple. Mr. Thesiger selected the Home Circuit and the Surrey Sessions, and was for several years one of the four counsel who enjoyed a monopoly of practice in the (now extinct) Palace Court. He thus obtained professional experience at a very early period of his career, and before many years had passed was extensively employed both in civil and in criminal cases. In 1834 he received a silk gown from Lord Lyndhurst, and in the following year he obtained a wide reputation by his management of the Dublin Election Petition, in which he was leading counsel for the petitioners, and in which (after a severe struggle) Mr. O'Connell was unseated. Before many years had elapsed, Mr. Thesiger became the leader of the Home Circuit, besides having a very large business in London.

In 1840 he unsuccessfully contested the borough of Newark in the Conservative interest, but a few months later he was elected M.P. for Woodstock, which borough he represented till 1844. He was M.P. for Abingdon from 1844 till 1852, and for Stamford from 1852 until his promotion to the woolsack. In 1844 he accepted office as Solicitor-General under Sir Robert Peel, and received the honour of knighthood, and in the following year the death of Sir William Follett led to his appointment as Attorney-General. He retired with his party in July, 1846, and had the ill-luck to miss, by two or three days, the appointment of Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, since Sir Nicholas Tindal died immediately after the change of ministry, and was succeeded by Sir Thomas Wilde, who had just been re-appointed Attorney-General. After vacating office, Sir F. Thesiger acted with the Protectionist Section of the Opposition, and from February till December, 1852, he was Attorney-General in the first Government of the Earl of Derby, but no opportunity of promotion occurred, and he was destined to remain at the bar for nearly six years longer.

Sir F. Thesiger was a frequent speaker in the House of Commons, and seldom failed to take part in the debate whenever a party struggle arose. He was very active in the debate upon the Ecclesiastical Titles Assumption Bill of 1851, in which measure he succeeded in introducing several important amendments, and he also for many years led the Opposition to the measure for rendering Jews admissible to Parliament. During this time his professional income was very large, and there were very few important trials in which he was not engaged. Although he never enjoyed the reputation of being a profound lawyer, he was a very successful advocate, being gifted with a commanding presence, a persuasive style, and great refinement of manner. He had much influence with juries, and great power and tact in cross-examining witnesses. One of his greatest professional achievements was his conduct of the celebrated case of Smyth v. Smyth, which was tried at Gloucester, in 1853, when his masterly cross-examination entirely demolished the case of the claimant to the estates and baronetcy. Among other celebrated actions in which he was engaged as counsel were Achille v. Newman, Lumley v. Gye, Sneyfen v. Sneyfen, and the Shrewsbury Peerage case before the House of Lords. The last important brief which he held was in the prosecution of the directors of the British Bank, in February, 1853, before the conclusion of which case he accepted the Great Seal on the formation of the Earl of Derby's second Administration. He was sworn a member of the Privy Council, and was created Baron Chelmsford, of Chelmsford, in the county of Essex, having selected his title in commemoration of the assize town in which he first became known as a rising member of his circuit. He held the Great Seal until June, 1859, when the Government was defeated, but he resumed office under Lord Derby in June, 1866, and retained it until March, 1868, when Mr. Disraeli succeeded Lord Derby as Prime Minister, and the Great Seal was given to Lord Cairns.

Lord Chelmsford's first appointment as Lord Chancellor was very much criticised on account of his presumed want of familiarity with the principles of equity. During his first Chancellorship he generally sat in company with Lords Justices Knight Bruce and Turner; but when he occupied the woolsack for the second time, his experience in the House of Lords had given him a considerable familiarity with chancery business. When out of office he was very conscientious in attending regularly on the hearing of appeals, and he very often took part in the business of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. His judgments were always carefully composed, and his courtesy rendered him extremely popular with the members of the bar who practised before him. He regularly attended the appellate sittings up to the end of the session of 1876, when increasing age compelled him to relinquish his duties. Among the more important judgments in which he took part were the Alexandra case (Attorney-General v. Sillia), Peck v. North Staffordshire Railway Company, Yelverton v. Yelverton, and Mordaunt v. Moncrieffe. The last occasion of his attendance at an appellate sitting of the House was in the case of Anderson v. Morice (25 W. R. 14, L. R. 1 App. 713) on the 27th of July, 1876, when he delivered a carefully written judgment upon the question whether the purchasers of a cargo to be shipped on board a particular vessel which was lost before the loading was complete had any insurable interest in the portion of the goods which had been shipped before the loss occurred; the law lords being equally divided on the question.

Lords Chelmsford was an honorary D.C.L. of the University of Oxford, a fellow of the Royal Society, and a bencher of the Inner Temple. He was the senior member of the bench of that society, and served the office of treasurer in 1843. He was married to the daughter of the late Mr. William Tinsley, of Southampton, but was left a widower in 1875. He is succeeded in the peerage by his eldest son, Major-General the Hon. Frederick Augustus Thesiger, C.B., who was born in 1827, and is at present Commander-in-Chief of the troops in South Africa. His third surviving son, the Right Hon. Alfred Henry Thesiger, was appointed a Lord Justice of Appeal last year, and his youngest son, the Hon. Edward Poirson Thesiger, is one of the clerks of the House of Lords and Secretary of Presentations to the Lord Chancellor. One of his daughters is married to Mr. William Frederick Higgins, barrister, one of the taxing masters of the Court of Bankruptcy.

Sir Laurence Peel, writing to the Times, says:—"There are few men, I suppose, now alive who have an older memory than my own of his career at the bar. When I was in a pleader's chambers, now fifty-six or fifty-seven years ago, I remember reading, in some instructions or papers that came into the chambers, an early speech of his at the bar, soon after his call, humorous and witty, with a quotation from Shakespeare that I yet remember. It is not of his wit and humour, and extraordinary aptness of quotation that I now wish to speak, but of his goodness. Never in my life did I hear a malignant reflection from his lips; and yet he was a man of wit, for many of his good things, some in form but puns, are really full of wit and subtle distinction. Men so gifted are often tempted to say smart things. I should describe him as the most innocuous wit that ever sparkled in my hearing. In every relation of life he was emphatically a good man. During many years of unprosperous political life and strife, I do not recollect having heard him utter an impatient, unthankful, or unbecoming word concerning unpropitious fortune. In his own family, though I am reluctant to pierce those shades, at his own table, surrounded by his children and grandchildren, he was radiantly happy, and presented one of the brightest and sweetest pictures of the head of a family that have fallen under my observation. He was eminently a high-minded gentleman in conduct ever. His legal reading and learning were to my own certain knowledge much more than the world gave him credit for. Lord Justice Turner spoke to me once to this effect, and commended his conduct and judgments in Chancery. Undoubtedly a chief justice-ship in a common law court would have been his more appropriate field. He wrote to me when I was in India more than once, concerning the fate of an old man at the bar, upon whom every year that passes is opening the sight of fresh and eager candidates for distinction, flying at the old cock of the walk; he wrote without acrimony, yet with a certain pathos. It was not his fate, however, to succumb. He had the unspeakable happiness of seeing worthy descendants, and if not rich in worldly possessions died rich in the best of possessions to bequeath—a good name."

Cases of the Week.

SOLICITOR—DEBTORS' ACT, 1878—DISCHARGE FROM PRISON.—The application to discharge a solicitor from prison, in the Matter of a Solicitor, for which leave was given last week (ante, p. 914) was made to Manisty, J., on Wednesday, and was opposed. It appeared that a sum of £400, or thereabouts, had been intrusted to the solicitor to invest on mortgage for a client, and he had put it in his own pocket. He was committed to prison, and, although he had been there for six months, it was urged that the judge ought to consider the circumstances, and exercise his discretion under section 1 of the Debtors Act, 1878. It appeared that when the order for committal was made by the Master of the Rolls the circumstances were not gone into. Manisty, J., said it was a serious case, and he should prefer to leave it for the Master of the Rolls to deal with, and the motion had better stand over till November.

SOLICITOR—STAMPING OF DEED—UNDERTAKING.—In another case, also noted ante, page 914, as In re a Solicitor, it was proved that a solicitor, who had acted for a purchaser, undertook to get a deed properly stamped, and his client accordingly gave him the deed and £22, the amount of stamp duty, last June. The solicitor had neglected to get the deed stamped, and his client now moved that he might be ordered to pay £32, being the amount of the duty and penalty. Manisty, J., thought the proper order would be to direct the solicitor to attend at the stamp office and get the deed stamped on a day and at an hour to be named in the order, and intimated that, in default, he would be committed.

ELIGIBILITY—EQUITABLE TITLE—INTERIM RECEIVER.—In Barrow v. Johnson, the plaintiff had obtained a writ of eligat, but as the property was in mortgage he was unable to enforce it, and, therefore, commenced this action to establish a charge. He now moved ex parte for a reference to chambers to appoint a receiver, and for the appointment of an interim receiver for fourteen days, or until further order, without security. The application was granted without prejudice to the rights of the incumbents.

USER OF COMPANY'S NAME—INJUNCTION—REGISTRATION.—In The Alcazar, Limited, v. Baum, also noted ante, p. 914, the plaintiff company moved to restrain the defendant from applying to the Middlesex Magistrates for a musical licence for the building now called the Holborn Amphitheatre under the name of "The Alcazar." The defendant on the 6th of August last gave the proper public notice of his intention to do so, and such notice was affixed to the building. The plaintiff company was registered as "The Alcazar, Limited," on the 6th of September last, and on the same day the directors registered at Stationers' Hall a prospectus stating that they intended shortly to build a new theatre in Leicester-square to be called "The Alcazar." In support of the motion it was urged that the intention of forming the plaintiff company had been known and discussed in theatrical circles for four months prior to August last, and that the defendant must have known of such intention; but his lordship considered there was no evidence to support that contention. In his opinion Mr. Baum had a perfect right in August to call his building by any name he thought fit, and he accordingly, in a very formal manner, adopted the name of "The Alcazar." Neither the subsequent registration of the plaintiff company under the name of "The Alcazar, Limited," nor the registration of the prospectus saying that a building not yet in existence was to be called "The Alcazar," could have such a retrospective effect as to take away the right, which the defendant had certainly acquired, to use that name. The motion was, accordingly, refused with costs.

Societies.

ANNUAL PROVINCIAL MEETING.

The annual provincial meeting of this society, for the present year, will be held in the Town Hall, Manchester, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 23rd and 24th of October next, on the invitation of the Manchester Incorporated Law Association.

It has been arranged, after communication with the Manchester Association, that the proceedings shall be as follow:—

After the address of the president, papers, contributed by members of the society, will be read and discussed. The meeting will adjourn at 1.30. It will be resumed at 2.30 and be closed at 4.30 o'clock. In the evening the members of the Incorporated Law Society attending the meeting will be entertained at dinner by the Manchester Association.

Thursday, 24th October.—The meeting will be resumed at 11 a.m., when the reading of papers, and the discussion thereon, will be continued, with an interval for luncheon between 1.30 and 2.30 p.m.

Arrangements will be made to enable the members who remain till Friday, the 25th October, to visit some of the leading manufactories in Manchester and its neighbourhood.

The honorary secretary of the Manchester Reception Committee, 9, Mount-street, Manchester, will be happy to give any further information with regard to the arrangements.

Subject to the control of the president, each gentleman will be at liberty to speak, and to vote upon any matter under discussion; all resolutions, expressive of the sentiments of the meeting, will be framed in the form of recommendations or requests to the council to take the subjects of such resolutions into their consideration.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

Mr. Shirley Shirley presided at the meeting held at Clements Inn-hall on Wednesday last, when the society unanimously passed a motion of condolence, proposed by the secretary and seconded by Mr. E. H. Quicke, expressing deep regret at the loss the society had sustained by the death of Lord Chelmsford, the president of the society. Mr. E. H. Pickersgill opened the following subject for discussion, viz.:—"That the present system of education adopted by the school boards is a failure." Messrs. Kains-Jackson and Skipper spoke on the affirmative side, and Messrs. Saw, Hazard, and Havergal on the negative. The question was ultimately determined in the affirmative by a majority of two votes.

Appointments, &c.

Mr. GEORGE HERBERT BATES, solicitor (of the firm of Bates & Jellicorse), of Manchester, has been appointed Deputy-Coroner for the Manchester District of the County of Lancashire. Mr. Bates was admitted a solicitor in 1872.

Henry Hobhouse, many years Under Secretary of State for the Home Department, and was born in 1819. He was educated at Eton and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he graduated first class in Literæ Humaniores in 1840. He was called to the bar at Lincoln's-inn in Easter Term, 1845, and practised in the Court of Chancery. In 1862 he became a Queen's Counsel, and afterwards confined his practice to the Rolls Court. He was appointed a Charity Commissioner in 1866, and an Endowed Schools Commissioner in 1869. From 1873 till 1877 he was legal member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, and in the latter year he was created a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India. Sir A. ## Legal News.

The Manchester Guardian states that Mr. Aspinall, Q.C., recorder of Liverpool, in opening the quarter sessions in that town on Monday, took the opportunity of expressing his thanks to the corporation for the ready way in which an addition of £400 to his salary had been voted.

It is stated that the commission days for the Western Circuit Winter Assizes, at which Lord Chief Justice Coleridge will preside, are fixed as follows:—Exeter, Saturday, October 26; Bristol, November 2; Winchester, Thursday, November 7.

Mr. T. W. Saunders, the late Recorder of Bath, who has been appointed magistrate at Lambeth Police-court, presided for the last time at Bath Quarter Sessions on Friday. The mayor, on behalf of the magistrates and citizens, and Mr. Bailey, the senior barrister, on behalf of the bar, congratulated Mr. Saunders on his promotion.

On Tuesday last, at Malton, Mr. James Blackburn, solicitor's clerk, was found nearly dead in his bedroom with a small phial of laudanum and a glass by his side. Attempts were made by a surgeon to restore him, but he died shortly afterwards. Mr. Blackburn, who was only about twenty-five years of age, had been for some time in the office of Mr. William Simpson, solicitor, clerk to the Divisional Magistrates, and was well known.

The forty-first half-yearly general meeting of the members of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association will be held in the Town Hall, Manchester, on Thursday morning, the 24th of October (before the business of the Incorporated Law Society recommences), for the purpose of receiving from the directors their half-yearly report; electing directors, auditors, and a new trustee; and transacting other business. The chair will be taken at ten o'clock (precisely).

At Bow-street Police-Court on Friday week, Charles James Bray, employed as managing common-law clerk to Messrs. Patterson & Co., solicitors, of Chancery-lane, was charged with embezzling various sums of money amounting to £800. Mr. G. Lewis, who conducted the prosecution, said the prisoner had been in the service of the prosecutors for ten years, beginning as an office boy, and was highly trusted by the firm. It appeared that sum of £64 4s. 9d., received from a client at Leeds to be paid into court, had been cashed by the prisoner, instead of being delivered to the cashier, and when the prisoner was taxed with the offence in the presence of Inspector Kerley, he at once admitted having appropriated the money, and confessed to defalcations amounting to £800. He said it was all owing to the curse of gambling. Mr. Lewis said that the firm had no desire to press the case harshly, and asked for a summary conviction; but Sir James Ingham said the matter was far too serious to be disposed of in that way, and remanded the prisoner for further examination.

A Manchester paper announces the death of Mr. W. Whitelegge Goulden, which occurred on Tuesday at his residence, the Crescent, Salford, after an illness extending over three weeks. About ten years ago Mr. Goulden retired from business, he being at that time head of the firm of Goulden & Swinburne, solicitors, 86, King-street (now Messrs. Swinburne & Parker), and he has since devoted himself almost exclusively to public work. He became a justice of the peace for the borough of Salford and for the Manchester Division of the county of Lancaster, a member of the Salford School Board, and chairman of the Salford Constitutional Association—of which body Mr. E. Hardcastle, M.P., is president—besides which he took an active part in promoting the work of the Church of England. Many years ago Mr. Goulden was a leading member of what was called the "Ten Churches Association," an organization established for the purpose of furthering church building; and latterly he took a great interest in the work of the Diocesan Church Building Society, the Diocesan Board of Education, and kindred associations.

The Morning Post states that the Federal Council of the German Empire is at present engaged in drawing up fresh regulations for the treatment of foreign men-of-war of all nations in German harbours, so far as the actions of customs-house officers are concerned. Hitherto foreign men-of-war have been dealt with differently by Prussian and non-Prussian customs' authorities, the former applying the same rule to vessels of all nations, the latter distinguishing between different flags and applying to each, in the case of war vessels, customs regulations and tariffs in force for merchantmen. Henceforth there is to be one rule for all. War vessels of all nations are to be exempt from all customs house interference so long as they do not land goods. In the same manner they are to be free to take on board from the harbour where they are staying whatever provisions they require free of duty, the only condition prescribed being that proof be produced of the goods being really taken on board the war vessel. Persons selling such articles to war vessels are, however, entitled to any bounty or drawback allowed by law for exportation or re-exportation. Goods landed from a war vessel are to be in any case liable to duty as if imported by merchantmen. The German Government hope in return for these facilities accorded to foreign war ships to obtain similar privileges in foreign harbours for their own.

Before Mr. Lathom Browne, revising barrister, at Bedford last week, a novel point arose in reference to a Conservative objection against an occupier in the parish of St. Mary.

There are five parishes in the borough, but, although each parish has its overseers, there is only one collector of poor rates, who holds his appointment from the Bedford Board of Guardians, his duties being those specified in the Consolidated Orders of the Local Government Board. In the case referred to, it appeared that the objection was lodged, not with the overseers of the parish, but at the office of the collector (situate in another parish), and therefore the overseers declined to publish the objection. In the course of the discussion which ensued it transpired that the collector does all the technical work in reference to the registration, valuation lists, and other parochial matters, and it was contended by the Conservative agent that the collector thus came within the definition given in the Act, to the effect that the word "overseer" (or overseers) of the poor shall be understood to mean all persons who, by virtue of their office or appointment, shall execute the duties of the overseers by whatever title they are called. On the other hand, it was contended by the Liberal agents that as the collector in this case is not an assistant-overseer he could not be held to come within the meaning of that expression. The duties of the collector were absolute and limited, and they could not be extended by local custom. No one would dream, for instance, of serving a licence notice on the collector. It was further elicited that for some few years past the method of serving the notice on the collector instead of upon the overseers of the parishes had been tacitly submitted to by both political parties. The revising barrister, under all the circumstances, held there was evidence that the notice had been served, but said he should be willing to grant a case. At the Liverpool Municipal Registration, before the mayor and two legal assessors, James Norbury, occupying a public-house, claimed to be placed on the register. He said he managed the house for Messrs. Segar, but while his engagement lasted he had full control of the premises. He received a smaller salary than he would otherwise do in consideration of his living in the house; but he would be at liberty to reside away from it. The licence was in his name, the furniture was his, and his family resided with him. The Liberal agent contended that this was simply occupation by an employer, and that the vote ought not to be allowed. The Conservative agent, however, pointed out the difference between the municipal and the Parliamentary franchise. The municipal franchise only required occupancy, and did not require that the voter should occupy in the capacity of owner or tenant. The occupancy in this case was established, while the reduction of salary in respect of residing at the house was in the nature of an equivalent for rent. The claim was allowed.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA,

Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.

Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of cocoas thickened yet weakened with starch, &c., and is REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup, costing less than a halfpenny.

COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer chocolate is prohibited.
